

The Buggy Bunch Reveals New Artwork on their Downtown Building

The Buggy Bunch has reached out to the Centennial Committee to recognize the 100th birthday of Vero Beach. As the owners of a “new home” for their organization, located on 21st Street in historic downtown Vero Beach and previously the Vero Furniture Mart annex store, they have enlisted an artist to paint a mural that is currently installed on the outside of their building.

Created and painted by artist Pamela Willoughby daughter of Buggy Bunch Board Member Sue Carter, the art shows the bridge over the intercoastals waterway and a banner conceived from the centennial logo, along with the Buggy Bunch logo. The bridge is symbolic for many reasons, but specifically because The Buggy Bunch began with their four founders walking the bridge for exercise and fellowship and has grown into a thriving 501c3 organization which impacts our community.

The Buggy Bunch seeks to build relationships with Indian River County mothers that will afford the opportunity to equip their families with programs and services that will assist in meeting their individual family urgent and changing needs. For more information on the mural or the organization, contact their Executive Director Tara Wright:
